ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system and method for managing calls in a mobile communication system transmits information indicative of an operational state of a first mobile terminal to a second mobile terminal for display. The first terminal may be a called terminal and the second terminal a calling terminal. A user of the second terminal can therefore recognize a reason for a communication blockage if a call between the first and second terminals is lost.